

CULTURE OF SIN

In reading the account of Lot in Genesis 19, it is easy to see how his close and constant proximity to the culture of Sodom affected his judgment. Just like Lot and his family were negatively affected by the culture of sin in Sodom, so too will kids from Christian homes be negatively affected by the public school's ungodly culture.

Environment is a huge influencer of thoughts. Thoughts produce actions, both of which have consequences, many of them eternal ones. The essence of the salt-and-light argument of Matthew 5:14-16 is to teach that Christians need to interact with the world to shine the light of Christ to it. Jesus teaches this by denouncing the negative. That is, He teaches against us hiding our light, because that light is the very reflection of Himself.

ACCURATE APPLICATION

Many well-meaning believers send their children to public schools believing they are following our Lord's teaching on this matter. Some even chastise those that do not as shirking their biblical responsibility on this point. What is the accurate application of the principle Jesus taught? While Jesus' enemies claimed he was a friend of sinners and tax collectors, Jesus made it crystal clear that only those who keep His commands can be His friends. Jesus was willing to be their friends and so reached out to them. But repentant belief was a necessary prerequisite.

In Jesus' appeal to sinners, and through His association with sinners, He did not participate in any of their sin. He did not join their team in order to save them. Rather, He went into their proximity to bid them to come out and join His.

PRODUCING BAD FRUIT

Regrettably, it is not so with kids being sent to public schools ostensibly as "salt-and-light." Unlike Jesus, they become, unwittingly, active participants in the evil of this system and so suffer from its corrupting influence. This is so because they are trained by the system they are supposed to be a light to, and so, in time, begin to produce its bad fruit. Separation from the essence and practice of the world is not possible for Christian children in public schools because that system exists as a fundamental building process that literally shapes a child's very being. This is what education is supposed to do. This formative aspect is missed by otherwise well-intentioned parents and pastors. The system deliberately and persistently inculcates students into the system. The educational process is fundamental because it is the primary means of building the child's understanding of the world, the universe, and of their place in it providing the child with the foundational building blocks of understanding. It also comprises the formative aspects of the child's relationship forming years. Bad company still corrupts good character. Christian kids joining a public school is the exact antithesis of the salt-and-light argument.

CITY ON A HILL

Embedded within the salt-and-light text, Jesus also speaks of a "city on a hill." Thus, any application of being "light" must be understood in this context. A city "on a hill," is clearly separate from, and therefore distinctly different than, the culture it exists within. This is so in three key aspects: in location, in elevation, and in illumination. Because of these, the city is able to be both protected and observed by others as attractive. Cities are unique, having borders and boundaries with names and locations that are distinct from other cities by which they are thus distinguished and identified. This city is "on a hill," a separated and tactically superior location, that is, protected yet visible to all. It is separated, but not isolated. Due to its elevation, it is the first to receive the morning light, and the last to part with it in the evening. After dark, light from the city itself illuminates its surroundings. This provides the ability for others to see thus distinguishing both its distinct presence and unique quality. City residents are in clear view of, but not squarely in the midst of, the culture in order to be seen by that culture as different and attractive, all the while avoiding the corrupting influence of that same culture. To go down off the hill and into the culture is to completely miss the analogy Jesus uses. Doing this would remove all of the city's advantages, effectively allowing the culture to block its radiance, obscure its light, essentially placing it "under a bowl," the very thing Jesus said to avoid. It is only by remaining on a hill, that is, separate and elevated, that the city “cannot be hidden.”

Joining the public school system then is actually a participation in the culture’s damaging institutions, methods, and philosophies, the effect of which diminishes the light and dilutes the salt, often to the point of eliminating them altogether. How can a student let his/her light shine when the institution itself prohibits students from using that light, that is, the light of God’s Word and Jesus’ own name ?

Instead, Scripture commands that we not participate in the fruitless deeds of darkness, but rather calls us to expose them. Indeed, we are commanded to demolish arguments and speculations (Greek. logismos – “logic/arguments”) and literally “every lofty thing raised up against the knowledge of God” and we are to “take every thought captive” in obedience to Christ. It is not only very possible to avoid the public school and still associate with, and witness to, those within it; but it is actually better suited to the text of Jesus’ salt-and-light analogy.

JESUS’ MODEL OF EDUCATION

In other words, choosing Christian alternatives to public school is the model Jesus is presenting as it applies to education. This means that kids from Christian homes would be acting in obedience to the salt-and-light directive Jesus articulated by avoiding the public school for far better Christian educational options, in order to be both protected and to show the light to the kids within the public system.

“You are the salt of the earth; but if the salt has become tasteless, how can it be made salty again? It is no longer good for anything, except to be thrown out and trampled underfoot by men. You are the light of the world. A city set on a hill cannot be hidden; nor does anyone light a lamp and put it under a basket, but on the lampstand, and it gives light to all who are in the house. Let your light shine before men in such a way that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father who is in heaven.” Matthew 5:14-16, NASB

About the Author: Jay Jusino earned a B.S. in Applied Biology and a B.S. in Biology Education from Ferris State University in Big Rapids, MI. Jay started his teaching career at an alternative school and has since taught in regular public, charter, and Christian schools, totaling over 22 years in education. Jay was married to Christy in 1998 and is a thankful husband and father of seven children, all of whom are homeschooled. Educating himself in both state and Christian colleges, Jay has experienced the full gamut of pedagogical philosophy and methodology, giving him a uniquely comprehensive perspective on the subject of education and teaching. Jay currently works in a Christian school in Suwanee, GA, where he teaches science. He is Author of, “Truth is Fallen in the Street: Examining the Pedagogy of Christian Teachers in Public Schools.” Contact him at riveroflife0513@gmail.com. Jay is a member of the Christian Education Initiative, www.Christedu.org.

Frontline Ministries, Inc., Exodus Mandate Project, Christian Education Initiative.

www.exodusmandate.org, www.Christedu.org.

Email: www.exodusmandate@gmail.com. P.O. Box
12072, Columbia, SC 29211 (803) 714-1744

Published September 2020

Just what is the Argument?

Written by Jay Jusino