

Empowering Families to Exit Dangerous Public Schools

For Immediate Release

DEL MAR, California (January 23, 2025) – Public School Exit (PSE), a major group advocating for alternative K-12 education in the United States, has put out an urgent call to action for American families to rally against the government-controlled education system.

PSE says the K-12 education system has become a weapon used against families, faith and freedom.

“Every public school is saturated with Marxist ideology, whether it's through the curriculum, textbooks, or even in social programs and extracurricular activities,” said PSE CEO Dran Reese. “Public schools are sexualizing American kids with radical sex education, including flagrant promotion of homosexuality, fornication, gender confusion and more.”

“Our children are no longer getting a true education. What they’re being subjected to is a form of indoctrination designed to reshape their worldview and undermine the values that have built this nation. More than 49-million children are trapped in the government-controlled education system and there is a growing movement to free families from this dependence. That is why PSE exists.”

The momentum behind Public School Exit is growing stronger by the day. PSE is working nonstop not only to gain the attention of parents, grandparents and educators but also of pastors, leaders and organizations all over the country. It is focused on delivering the tools to create a superior, well-educated citizen of America.

Public School Exit has set its sights on raising $250,000 to fund a national campaign to empower families to make better educational choices for their children. The number one objection of parents is that they can’t afford to pay for their child’s education. Imagine a nation that rallies around its children with a national scholarship campaign to make this transition possible.
